Writing

be gr
"A bird may be known by its song" may be understood as an idiom. For example, a person who you know may behave in some other situation as you expected. Or, let's imagine the other situation: You found out that your acquaintance has stolen something or did something that you could expect from that person.

nothing gr
I think I could tell you a situation ~~of my~~ which happened in my own life. So, I had a friend (let's call him friend, okay?) and he had an obsessive compulsive disorder; he constantly tried to steal something from me or gr my friend his other friends, as if the mind itself gr tell him to do that. And it's worth to state that I have a phobia of stealing from me something. gr So, that's happened! He had stolen my "Abbey Road" cassette! gr Later he had stolen the money from some other bloke, and I knew that gr will happen early or later. sp

In conclusion I must say that you could understand that sentence as you wish and it's my own humble opinion. sp
